

Our spectroscopy lab capabilities allow us to measure the emission and absorption spectroscopy of solid state materials from 10 degrees Kelvin to room temperature. Pulsed excitation sources from the ultraviolet to the near-IR are available for radiative decay lifetime measurements. Quantum mechanical modeling for predicting efficient laser materials and their performance dynamics are also performed.